

We are willing to take on issues of great importance, because it is the right thing to do.

We are known as Philadelphia Lawyers--willing to take on issues of great importance, because it is the right thing to do. We bear with pride our public trust to pursue social justice on behalf of all citizens, regardless of whether they are able to pay for our services, and we honor our professional responsibility to perform public interest legal service.

The Public Interest Section continues that tradition of public service.

The Public Interest Section of the Philadelphia Bar Association provides a forum for new ideas in public interest lawyering, for new direction in volunteer service, and for new ventures of critical importance to the lives of the poor, the disabled, children, the elderly, women, victims of discrimination, the abused, the homeless, and other members of our society who often lack advocates to speak for them.

The Public Interest Section includes eight standing committees. Your participation in these committees is encouraged.

Stay abreast of new developments in the law and take advantage of exciting opportunities to help shape the future of our society through membership in the Public Interest Section. Section activities include: meetings with prominent guest speakers; a newsletter to highlight developments in pro bono and public interest law; continuing legal education programs designed for public-interest practitioners; and outreach efforts to area law students.
